Celebrating our employee graduates

Mala Chetty

We know that encouraging and investing in our employees – whether through direct financial assistance, support from peers, or making resources more accessible – will allow our staff members to realize their full potential as exceptional colleagues and professionals.

We commend our employee graduates for their extraordinary efforts and tap them with further responsibility to elevate and motivate the people around them.

Scribante Labour Consultants recognise employee excellence

Recognition Awards

PHILANI MANGENI

In today's ultra-competitive work environment, the companies with the winning edge are the ones that have the best-trained and well-skilled staff.

Employee recognition is the acknowledgment of a company's staff for exemplary performance. Essentially, the goal of employee recognition in the workplace is to reinforce particular behaviours, practices, or activities that result in better performance and positive business results.

One of the biggest motivators for employees is to be held in high esteem by their peers. The best way of earning this respect is by being acknowledged for being good at what they do.
